Our Wine Merchants

Addison's

Started trading in the 1800s when John Cliff Addison opened a grocer and wine merchant in Newport, Salop (as Shropshire was once known). Later in the 1900s two further premises were acquired in Shrewsbury and Stafford and a wholesaling division was created.

Addison's has passed through a further 4 generations of the family, and although it operates today as a drinks wholesaler rather than a retailer, David and Jon Horton, the '5th Generation', put the longevity of Addison's success down to the ethos that has always applied - supporting unique and interesting products that have been created with passion, dedication and sheer hard work – products that we are proud to sell and as well as share with friends and family.

Savage Selection

Mark Savage has over 50 years' experience traveling the world and tasting wines, in both well-trodden and the more obscure regions. Selected wines are the result of rigorous scrutiny applying the principles of balance, vitality and originality and Mark works with winegrowers to get the best out of their vineyards.

"I often think that my job consists largely of being able to identify potential, both in respect of a vineyard and an individual wine, but also with regard to the human individuals who are responsible for realising the potential of their land. If our list of producers is better today than it was 20 years ago that is because we continually try to identify those that are compatible in terms of size, psychology and philosophy." Mark Savage

"I don't think Mark Savage could buy a dull wine if he tried" Oz Clarke

ALLAN SCOTT Family Winemakers

Nobody has more experience of growing grapes in Marlborough than Allan Scott. Allan was instrumental in the initial planting of the region's most famous vineyards and hasn't strayed very far from his roots, with Allan Scott's cellar situated on Jackson Road, across from the vineyards of Cloudy Bay.

Back in 1973 viticulture in Marlborough was just beginning, Allan was one of its first pioneers. Allan and his wife Catherine first purchased land in what was to become known as Marlborough's "Golden mile", planting the entire property with vines. Armed with his passion for viticulture, a thirst for knowledge and sheer hard work and determination he produced some of Marlborough's best vines and developed local techniques which are now the basis of standard viticultural practice in New Zealand.

In 1989 with a wealth of experience from successfully contracting out his precious grapes Allan felt it was time to venture into the wine making world himself. Further land purchases were made and Allan Scott Family Winemakers was born.

The operation today couldn't be more family focussed. Allan's son Josh heads up the Winemaking Team. The vineyards were Josh's playground as a boy and after graduating he spent time working in some of the most famous wine regions of the world. After his return home followed by a very successful foray into the world of brewing, establishing Moa Beer as a household brand in New Zealand, Josh joined the family business and has been a constant in bringing innovative and transformative changes resulting in the modern and cutting edge winery Allan Scott is proud to be today.

Josh's sisters Victoria and Sara are also fundamental parts of the team. Victoria is responsible for Marketing and Sarah is a qualified winemaker so works closely with her brother Josh.

Agustín Lanús WINES

Agustin Lanús Wines

"Many say that driving 9 hours into the mountains on dangerous dirt roads just to check on our grapes is crazy, but then they try the wine and they understand."
- Agustín Lanús

Argentine agricultural engineer turned winemaker, Agustin Lanús, is not only a sommelier but a Master of Science in Viticulture and Oenology from the highly respected Vinifera Euro Master program, so it would be fair to say he knows what he is doing.

Having worked at some of the top wineries the world has to offer, Ceretto, Chateau Beychevelle, Rutini, KWV, to name but a few, in 2006 Agustin ventured deeper into his homeland, namely to the Calchaqui Valley to learn about the unique micro-terroirs found at extreme altitudes.

What he has gone on to achieve since those first explorative days is truly remarkable. Producing wine from vineyards that are anywhere between 1,650 to 3,100 meters above sea level, when you consider European vines are grown in the region of 1,300 meters, it beggars belief that vines can thrive. Grapes take longer to mature at this altitude which results in their skins becoming thicker and accompanied by low yield harvests Agustin is able to expertly craft incredibly complex and full-bodied wines. The vineyards located in Salta, Tucuman and Santa Maria produce wines with such purity of fruit they truly of showcase, and are a testament to, the extraordinary expression achievable with extreme altitude winemaking - taste and you will understand.
